Her desire is to encourage, build, and inspire her listeners to long for a more intimate relationship with God, and therefore a better understanding of themselves. So prepare yourselves for a fresh awakening that can only be manifested through a fresh anointing.

Cynthia has had the pleasure of performing for world renowned Dr. Maya Angelou; the writing and recording powerhouse Ashford and Simpson; opening for Regina Belle and Jennifer Holliday; performing Carry the Flame, at the Winter Olympics Torch Ceremony, Bay Area Art & Soul Festival, the Music Matrix of San Jose and many, many churches and special events throughout the country have been blessed by her talent.

Her first album, "His Joy My Strength" was tremendously well received on both a local and regional level. It features a combination of the various singing styles and sounds that display Cynthia's repertoire of musical influences. Her second album, "Can You Hear the Voice?" is currently receiving both national and international exposure. The focus that the Father has given with this body of work, Cynthia says, "Is to challenge God's people to spend time with Him and His Word so that we can learn to hear and respond to the voice of the Lord."

"Alive to Thrive" is Cynthia's current project, and in distinctive style, she brings her refreshing presence to each song on the album. Producers Carl Wheeler and Michael Sutton have teamed with Cynthia to bring a very timely message; a reminder that no matter what we may be experiencing during these difficult economic times, God's message to us is still progression and not recession! Much excitement is being generated, and we are in anticipation of what God will do with this now word!

Cynthia holds a masters degree in public administration, and also enjoys presenting motivational speaking seminars on Overcoming Overwhelm, Living Life on Purpose, The Road to Balance, and Prospering Through Change to name a few.

One of Cynthia's greatest joys is her daughter Jasmine; a fourth year student at UCLA serving as student body President. Jasmine is majoring in Communications Studies with a minor in Musical Theatre.
